so this is a first in hopefully many.
i'm really hoping you enjoy this whatever-this-is.
i'm making this for the oddones, the sinners,
the witches, warlocks and high sages out there.
the ones who rip under shadow cast city lights.
who bleed hyper 808s and multicolored record breaks, and breathe in the cold, crisp air during moments of aetheric metanoia.
surfing from midnight hour til break-o-dawn on ambient dronewaves.

who's dreams will speak to the cosmos.

ROADSTAR MAGAZINE

with blades on the rise and me skating (or well at least trying to. skates are in another state :/) i figured i'd drop something like a beginner tutorial.
to anyone who is just starting or is curious about skating, welcome.
(if you're here from the BRC community,
'yo whaddup), this sec is just gonna be usually some recs and things to look out for as far as what to get for gear, what styles of skating are there, frames, wheels, etc.

it'll hopefully add up as time goes, but for now you got my word :3

So skate types first:

we have recreational skates, aggressive skates, speed skates, freestyle skates, wizard skates, and basically anything in between now lol.
(if you're just starting, i'd recommend getting a rec skate so you can get the basics down)

To go down the list...

Rec Skates

Usually beginner skates but good all rounders for basically most situations, indoor and outdoor.
They have softer wheels for better comfort during riding and the wheel size isn't too small or big.

Aggressive Skates

These are the ones you usually see performing grinds and riding in vert. They have bigger soulplates for soul grinds. And grooves built in for an easier frontside or backside grind. They have smaller wheels (usually 58mm to 60mm) so top speed is slower but acceleration is high.

Speed Skates

Da big wheel skate. The wheels are usually like 100 to 120mm. These skates are used for racing and sometimes downhill bombing. They're made very aerodynamic.

Freestyle Skates

These skates are similar to Rec Skates but they usually have slightly bigger and harder wheels.
They're used for slalom or freestyle skating, where skating becomes more of a dance than it already can be.

Wizard Skates

These are a newer version of skate that has 5 wheels built into it. Used for crazy spins and maneuverability.
It's hard to explain other than similar to Freestyle skating but with more wheel. Just search up Wizard Skating.

honestly tho..

it doesn't matter what you skate, as long as you feel good doing it.

if you get the chance, try some on, pick what you think looks cool and go fuck it up.

(again if you're a beginner however, unless you're REALLY down for it, i'd recommend some rec skates first. also protective gear lmao.)

but here are my recs as far as skates go:

A young girl with long, straight black hair and a white headband with a black triangle is looking towards the viewer with a nervous expression. She is wearing a white collared shirt and a dark blue jacket. Her hands are clasped together in front of her. The background is a brightly lit airport terminal with a large airplane visible on the right. A speech bubble is on the left, and several sad face emojis are at the bottom left.

O.K.
so what i mainly do is like agro/freeskating, so let's talk about...

"FRAMES"

Now.

4 Wheel Drive

Flat Frames

Good for cruising and speed and having speed for jumps and airs.
And speed and stability too!
With landing and maneuvering.

Anti-Rocker Frames

Really good for locking in on grinds. For the elite skater (or whatever lolol) Jokes aside, this is a good frame if you're really trying to make sure your grinds stick.

LOCKIN

Free Stylin'

Freestyle Frames

Two wheels only. All I need.
Great for sliding into grinds, will catch on ledges so be careful. Good for that flow type shi.

X NEXT THE WHEELS

So with wheels, you wanna look for the size and hardness of the wheel.

For a hardness example:

Something like 84a will be softer to manage as far as being on rough roads. So a more comfortable ride. But it would catch if you tried to hit a one wheel slide.

Meanwhile 95a is great for the skatepark but riding on the road, you'll feel every single fuckin' bump and you'll like wanna die (unless you're just built different lol).

And for wheel size:

If you have smaller wheels like on the standard agro skate, you'll have acceleration but not much top speed.

And for the bigger wheels, you get more top speed.

However, it's harder to balance and keep stability so it's only good if you know what you're doing.

EXTRA GRI

Don't be stupid. (Or do. I ain't ya ma.)
When you jump on a rail or ledge,
COMMIT. Just practice landing on the thing.
Do not step up, it'll be easier to learn.

Invest in some wax. You don't wanna go for something and then it's not waxed.
You'll fly.

Learn how to fall. I.E. Breakfalling!
If you're already in Martial Arts or Parkour, hell yhea same. But also you know how to fall so no worries.

Vibe out to some music!
(But only when you're like by yourself at the skatepark. You wanna be aware of your surroundings lmao.)
If you don't know what to do, just siddown and watch. Talk with folks.

myhea that's it.

LEAVE IF YOU CANNOT HANDLE THERE ARE NO CHAPERONES

"AETHERIC METANOIA"??

"MUZAK IS THE SOUL"??

"MELANCHOLIA"??

Correct.

Short for 'Melancholic Nostalgia.' Sort of like an elegiac feeling, or to sonder. A feeling I encounter on a day to day, in my sleepless nights and chaotic daydreams til Hypnos lies me fast to sleep. I'm not even sure if that word can describe the feeling. (Language is a virus, etc.) But it's why I seem to gravitate moreso to the stories, creations and passions where the style IS substance. The artist fucking loves and hates you (YES, YOU) at the same time. Where bittersweet moments are fleeting and the struggle is palpable. And yet, the air is crisp and fresh in your lungs. You are aware. Present.

AMB.

Maybe you're doing well, maybe not. Maybe you're searching for more, maybe not searching at all.

It reminds me of a phrase or a state of being. Mono No Aware (物の哀れ). Like being reminded of the state of things and how as fast as they come, they go. And just having to sit with that knowledge until you eventually go as well. So you look back on the now. The past. The moment with your loved ones pasting through your fingers with such a sweet, bittersweet warmth.

But with that knowledge, with being a knower (lol), you can just as easily jump back when things push you down. Memento Mori, yes. And yet, Memento Mori all the same.

Quick question to you reading this:

Do you hear colors? Do you see colors when you listen to music?

If so, haha samesies. Dap me up. I'm dapping you up rn rn.

But that also means, you can understand what I mean by 'Muzak is the Soul'. All creations have soul. All creations have a voice, a vibration they echo. From a sticker slapped on a wall to a chisel piercing marble, everything is art in someway. It gives off energy, a frequency and that frequency can be seen to the keen eyes in different ways and felt by all no matter the sound it echos.

It's like what the Beat Soul is all about (lol). It's a mixture of all paths tossed into a champloo.

"MAGICK" cont.

If you hyperfixated on JSRF like I did, I know you know what I mean. But I'll explain it further. We all have moods and it fluctuates overtime. Those moods are either amplified or damped by the sounds we hear, the music we listen to, the words we speak, the words we understand.

It is always constant. Always moving, never stopping. And we share our thoughts, feelings and all through paint we lay, the rick we place, the flip we take, the note we sing. It goes out and someone, somewhere takes that energy and renews it. Like how we get inspired by each other, how we collab for movements, how we hold each other up. Energy is art, art is energy, the most potent of that being music. You see an image and you think to yourself, this song would go so well with it. Or at least, I do. Isn't there some magick at work there?

[ like currently right now, i'm listening to repercussion by drama trial. there's just an energy, vibrant greens and yet unsure and scared teals to seafoams. it truly fucks. like once your mind accepts your own version of what i'm talking about? truly peam. ]

Ah yhea right. I think it would be a liddle funny to do one of these. Lemme know if you get anything out of it okay?

Holy shit, synchro'd..

this is basically screaming. it's saying that 'yhea hey, make sure you have your internal checked. this is the time for the maintenance check. because you know what you want. you know what you need. and to whoever this is for (rinda for me too) it's explaining literally what i've been typing about this whole time. energy flowing, crashing, never stopping. what you do in the day will help with your goals, even if it's seemingly small to you, a small wave can cause a big crash.

if you can't see clearly, it's The Moon Upright, and fuckin' Cups VII to IX reversed. put on heartbeat heartbreak from p4 cuz ya girl cooking.

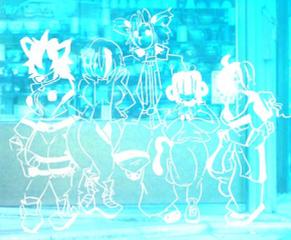

based as hell... wtf.

I'll leave you with a few games I've been really hyped about:

Cicadamata!

It's been a big experience!

The music, the high octane movement, like so much going on.
It's such a treasure already and I can't wait to play more.

Hope Left Me

It spooked me at the beginning menu but past that is a very melancholic but warm story about figuring things out in isolation with another.
You just have to play it, I approvb.

Airframe Ultra

I've been keeping my eye on this one but to finally get my hands on it for a bit, it was fuckin' wild.
The flow of the game feels very natural and yhea there's some bugs here and there but it's definitely worth a try!

Skate Story

Haven't played a lot of it but it's such a solid skater.
It's definitely going into my staple games to just cruise and do fliptricks on.
